Fred Goodroe, 30, of Bedford, P. Q., had both legs cut off below the knees Thursday near Swanton. He was given medical treatment as soon as found, but he died from the shock and loss of blood. He had two cuts on his head, one being long and deep and extending to the tissues of the skull. He also had a black eye and an abrasion on the shoulder. He was apparently intoxicated when the doctors attended him directly after the accident. Shortly before he was run over Goodroe was assaulted by Charles Robinson at a shack occupied by the Lavigne family shack occupied by the Lavigne family near the railroad tracks. The men were talking when Robinson suddenly knocked Goodroe down and struck him several times. Amos Lavigne told Robinson to stop, as he had given Goodroe enough. After lying on the ground some time Goodroe staggered down the railroad track, groaning and wiping the blood from his face. When about half way between the crossing and the dry bridge he fell and lay with his legs across the rails. After he was run over the trainmen picked him up and carried him to the East Swanton railroad station, where physicians attended him. It is said that members of the Lavigne family knew that cians attended him. It is said that members of the Lavigne family knew that Goodroe was lying helpless on the railroad track, but they gave no warning. An autopsy indicated that Goodroe did not die from the assault, but from his injury on the railroad. Robinson fied from town, but later was arrested at the home of his mother in Lowell, Vt., and brought sack to Swatton. He was arraigned beback to Swanton. He was arraigned before Justice Reynolds on a charge of as-sault and battery, bound over in the sum of $1000, and taken to jall at St. Albans. of 1909, and taken to jall at St. Albans. Amos Lavigne, when examined in regard to the case, perjured himself and his arrest with committal was ordered. Dear Sir: Here's a story with a point to it.

Devoe lead-and-sine is a cheaper paint than had-and-soil; costs less, goes further, wears twice as long. But this last don't belong to the story we're going to tell this time.

One of the best painters in Uniontown, Pa., is L. O. Rutter; does all the best work. We told him Devoe goes further than lead-and-slifer mixed paint.

He said: "I've known it for two years, and have increased my business by it. I take a job for less money than anybody else, and get my pick of the work. Don't give it away; for robody knows how I do it."

The name to go by is Devoe.

Claimed Liquor Seller Was Not Wilful Violator.

Judge E. C. Mower, in the Burlington city court Saturday, gave a decision which, if upheid, will have an important effect on the disclosure feature of the present liquor law of the state. This point was raised in the case brought against Lee Raylin, a second-class license holder of Winooski. The case grew out of a disclosure made by Dan Monahan, who was charged with a second offense in city court. When Ravlin was in court he admitted having received notice from the commissioners that Monahan had been drunk and that liquor should not be sold to him; but he said he did not know Monahan. Judge Mower quoted the statute as follows:

'A person who wilfully violates any of the provisions of this act for which a penalty is not otherwise prescribed, shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $200, or be imprisoned not less than one, nor more than three months, or both."

The judge said that he did not believe the intent of the law was to make a license a wilful violater of the law when he did not have knowledge of the identity of a man to whom he sold liquor. Ravlin was discharged.

This point has been much discussed by saloon keepers, who claim that an in-justice is done them in the matter of dis-closures, as they assert that it is an impossibility for a dealer to know the name of every man to whom he sells. With 600 or 700 names posted they say it is im-possible for a dealer or his bartender to Church Fight at West Burke. The Universalists at West Burke are engaged in a bitter church fight, and the matter will be taken into the courts for settlement. The church burned about three years ago, and the assets of the society consist of an insurance of about $2000, a fund of $250, the bell and a few small articles saved from the fire. One faction wants to wind up the society's affairs, while the other faction wants to rebuild, with the $2250 for a starter, and have the court compel the other side to pay their share of the expenses of build-ing. The court has appointed three commissioners, who have met and heard the evidence and the arguments submitted by St. Johnsbury lawyers. Now they prepare their report and submit it to the residing judge of the June term of the Caledonia county court, who has jurisdiction in the matter.

Largest Contract for Stone Ever Let In United States.

The largest contract ever awarded in the United States to one concern for cut stone is giving the granite industry of Hardwick a boom. This largest contract, which is held by the Woodbury company, calls for 225,000 cubic dimension granite for the Cook County courthouse at Cnicago. Of the 2500 inhabitants of the town, two-thirds of the people are dependent on the quarries. The Chicago building will be 300x350 feet long and 11 stories high, about 200 feet above the street. As well as furnishing some of the largest blocks of granite ever used in the construction of a building, the Woodbury company is to cut 14 massive Corinthian columns, nine feet in diameter by 94 feet high. The carved caps will be 14 feet square, eight feet six inches high.

All went well until the boy, with an eager expression, suddenly touched the lawyer's arm and said: "Mr. Clark, this is your glass of water." "Tank you, dear," said the man and resumed his conversation. A little later Bobby urged: "It's very good water, Mr. Clark." "Yes, dear, I know," was the response. Finally, after waiting until his small stock of patience was entirely exhausted, Bobby exclaimed: "Mr. Clark, why don't you take a drink of water?" The map looked wonderingly at the child and said: "Well, Bobby, I'll take the water if you'll tell me why you are so anxious to have me do so." And the guests were properly sorry for Bobby's father, when the child replied: "My papa says you drink like a fish, and I've been waiting to see you do it."

Recent Sale of Real Estate at Amsden. A large transaction in real estate took place recently at Amsden, when the en-tire Amsden business, consisting of a whole village of a dozen houses or more store, blacksmith shop, saw mill, grist mill, church, two lime kiln quarries, woodland, private road and bridge up Black river, several four-horse teams, ox teams, etc., were sold to Maxwell Evarts of Windsor by Charles Wood-

The village and business were founded and named by the late, Hon. Charles Amsden. He was born May 6, 1832, in West Windsor. Mr. Amsden came from sturdy New England parentage, his sturdy New England parentage, his grandfather. Abel Amsden, having been a pioneer of the town of Reading, a soldier during the Revolutionary war and a prominent maa of his time. Charles Amsden grew to young manhood on his father's farm, obtaining his education in the common schools. When 17 years of age, with $100 and a large amount of energy and business ability, he went to what is now the thriving village of Amsden. Then it was only a woody swamp situated in a valley through which ran a tributary of the Black river, surrounded by hills containing the lime rock which makes the leading industry of the village today. During the second year of his residence in this locality Mr. Amsden had the foresight and business ability den had the foresight and business abilit-to realize how much wealth lay concealed in the rocky hills about the place. He built two lime kilns and engaged in the lime business, also dealing in lumber grain and general merchandise. From this small beginning has grown a pros-perous village, the land has been redeemed from its swampy condition and where once nothing but bogs and frog ponds met the eye are need green meading. From a small beginning has also grown an extensive business in the lime industry. The lime stone is drilled and blasted from the solid ledge into small rocks which are then carted to the klins and dumped into their hawn-ing mouths from whonce soon arises a dense black smoke. During the busiest dense black smoke. During the busiest season of the year the fires are kept running day and night. After the lime rock is properly burned, it is shipped all over Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York. About 10,000 barrels are produced annually and used for a variety of purposes.

Mr. Amsden died Nov. 1, 1900, leaving a wife and daughter, Mrs. Charles Woodruff of Woodstock. The village and business then passed into the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff, who have sold it to Mr. Evaris.
